Hollywood Actress Abandons Career For Religious Work

HOLLYWOOD. — One of movieland's most promising actresses was quitting the movies and a career to become a missionary of a religious teacher. Colleen Townsend, the actress, making that statement, said her decisions had been made "because Christ is first in my life and I want to be where I can serve Him most."

The pretty brunette notified the studio where her career was hitting the top that she would not renew her contract. She said she would enter a theological school to study religion for two years. Then, she said, she would go into "Christian education, either teaching in churches or missionary work."

(Miss Townsend was "Sweetheart of The Orange Bowl Festival" and appeared at the half when Santa Clara defeated Kentucky at Miami in the postseason football game in January.)

"It's not that I can't serve Christ in motion pictures, but I feel God has led me into some sort of full-time service," the actress said.

"I first accepted Christ two and a half years ago and it was then theology became interesting to me. I had never let it become important before.

"Many young people I'd gone with to Hollywood high school asked me to join the First Presbyterian church. What those young people had challenged me. They had something I wanted.

"I realized I had gone to church all my life, but didn't know what it was to be a Christian. So I looked into Christ's teachings."

Miss Townsend had gone to "various" churches, including the Presbyterian and the Mormon, when she was in high school. At Brigham Young university in Utah she was a member of the Mormon Sunday school on the campus, she said.

Milkman's Faithful Donkey Helps Solve Master's Murder

ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT. — A milkman's faithful donkey has helped solve his master's murder in a unique case here.

Gunmen killed milkman Hassanein Atta, 45, for reasons unknown. Atta's donkey, covered with his master's blood, continued on his usual rounds, stopping before each place where Atta had customarily delivered milk.

A shopkeeper noticed the blood and called police. Officers backtracked and arrested two men who had not even bothered to flee, believing it wofld be hours before their crime was discovered.

New Telescope Is to Be Shared By 3 Countries

GLENBROOK, CONN. — A new type of telescope, the first of its kind ever built, designed to penetrate farther than ever before into the vastness of the Milky Way with its hundreds of billion stars has been transferred by its makers to representatives of three nations. They will collaborate in its use in South Africa.

The new telescope, a marvel of optical precision, will enable astronomers to photograph areas in the Milky Way 30,000 light years, or 180 quadrillion miles away. It will produce star images of near-perfect quality over an area of the sky equal to almost 100 times the area covered by the full moon.

Its penetration into space will be three times greater than present instruments of similar design, which limited the detailed exploration of the Milky Way to a distance of 10,000 light-years. A light-year is the distance traveled by light in a year at a speed of 186,000 miles a second, or six trillion miles.)

Is Giant Camera

The new explorer of space is known as a Baker-Schmidt type of telescope, a greatly improved version of the famous telescope invented by Richard Schmidt of Hamburg, Germany, which combined the ability of the reflecting telescope to penetrate to great distances with that of the refracting type's ability to cover a wide area of the sky with perfect image quality over the entire photographic plate.

The Baker-Schmidt type was designed by James G. Baker, research associate of the Harvard observatory and consultant to the Perkins-Elmer corporation here, which built the first model of this type.

The Schmidt telescope, actually a giant camera, has one mirror and a correcting lens. The Baker-Schmidt telescope-camera has two mirrors in addition to the correcting lens. The addition of the secondary mirror makes it possible to use a flat photographic plate, instead of the curved plate of the conventional Schmidt telescope.

This flat field, or flat focal surface, it was explained, makes it possible to photograph stars with one-hundred-thousandth of the light of the faintest star seen by the naked eye in no more than twenty minutes, much faster than ever before. The flat field also makes it possible to photograph a much larger area of the sky than ever before.

Jointly Owned

The telescope will be owned and jointly operated by three world famous observatories — The Harvard Observatory, the Armagh Observatory of Northern Ireland, and the Dunsink Observatory of the Republic of Ireland. Astronomers of each observatory will work on separate sections of the Milky Way at the Boyden Station of the Harvard Observatory of Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, South Africa, headquarters of the "Hub of the Universe" expedition, as the venture is named.

Harvard has staked out a claim to the center of the Milky Way, while the two Irish groups will study the outer parts of the vast galaxy, of which our solar system is an insignificant part some 30,000 light-years away from the center.

Mechanical Brain Human Enough to Do Cheating

KELLOGG, IDA.—A mechanical brain so human it even "cheats" has been developed by an 18-year-old scientific wizard here.

The machine can beat any human at tick-tack-toe without cheating, says its inventor, Noel Penney Elliot, a senior in Kellogg high school.

But still it will try to chisel a little if its human opponent isn't careful.

The game is played by switches and lights in nine squares on top of the 13-inch-square, 16-inch-high machine. The hapless human throws a switch in a square to start the game.

Instantly the machine comes back with its move, "without even stopping to think," says the husky, bespectacled young scientist. And so on until the machine either has won or tied.

"I catch it cheating now and then," Noel said. "Sometimes it will turn on lights in two squares during one turn. I'm working on it to see what the cause is."

Teen-Ager Out-Wrestles Assaulter, Who Escapes

CLEVELAND, OHIO. — A girl teen ager who learned wrestling tactics by watching television routed a street thug here.

Marion Vill, 17, told police that when the man grappled with her, "I grabbed his index finger and bent it back hard. He let go and I punched him twice. He ran one way and I ran the other."

She also credited her brother, Don, a football player for Bowling Green university, with teaching her some o fthe tricks.

Marriage Training Is Popular Course For Boys, Young Men

NEW YORK. — Education for marriage and family living, long the primary concern for girls, is being expanded rapidly among boys and young men—largely at their own request. That's the report of Dr. Ernest G. Osborne, professor of education at teachers' college, Columbia university.

Extra-curricular courses on courtship, marriage and family life are being organized or are already underway at Princeton, Amherst, Rutgers and Cornell, Dr. Osborne said.

In line with this trend, the national committee on work with boys of the Young Men's Christian association have appointed a commission to study ways of "family centerings" its programs, providing more education for family life and more opportunities for family activities. Results of the investigation and the commission's recommendations will go to all Y.M.C.A. boys' work secretaries.

Dr. Osborne, who is also president of the National Council on Family Relations, discussed the use of films in family education courses.

He explored briefly some of the difficulties resulting from the self-deception involved in romantic love. He discussed a study of different personality types and how they act in moments of stress.

It is essential that the showing of such films be preceded by preparatory work and followed by well-led discussions, Dr. Osborne said. Pictures that are intended only to raise a problem for discussion can create anxiety and tension in the audience if the difficulties presented are not talked about afterward with a skilled leader in charge.

Developing a feeling of guilt and a sense of sin may be all right in religion, Dr. Osborne said, but his experience has convinced him that such negative feelings create a poor basis for building better personal relationships. It is easy to get across to people the idea that they have fallen down, but it is not very helpful.

Police Find, and Deliver Stolen Car; Owner Sleeps

MILWAUKEE, WIS. — A former New Yorker who had lived here only two months got a sample of the efficiency of Milwaukee police recently.

So impressed was the new Milwaukeean, Adolph Mandl, that he telephoned the newspaper to tell about it.

"Imagine," said Mandl "They woke me up and said my car had been stolen and they had recovered it. I didn't even know it was stolen. Not only that, but they were extremely courteous. Extremely courteous."

Mandl's car had been parked in front of his apartment. The thief lacking an ignition key, tried to start it by crossing the wires. Unsuccessful, he stopped a taxicab driver and asked for a push.

The cabby pushed the car for blocks, but it wouldn't start.

Disgusted, the cabby halted. He lifted the car hood and looked at the engine. He saw the crossed wires and concluded that he had been aiding a thief. He stalled, hoping a policeman might come along.

When Patrolman Joseph Miszewski chanced to come by a few minutes later, the cabby hailed him.

The thief ran. The policeman and the cabby couldn't overtake him.

Patrolman Miszewski notified the detective bureau. The license number was checked. A few minutes later, Patrolmen Raymond Bednarek and Henry Kubiak were on their way to Mandl's apartment.

Supersonic Dentist Drill To Eliminate Much Pain

ST. LOUIS. — Researchers are perfecting a supersonic dental drill that is supposed to be painless, it was reported today.

The new gadget is airdent, a device that eliminates the pain of a conventional drill by shooting a stream of gas and abrasive at the tooth.

Airdent first was brought to public attention in 1945 by its originator, Dr. Robert Black, Corpus Christi, Tex. Now hand-tooled models of the device are being tested at college dental schools, including Washington University here.

Washington researchers said that so far results with the new drill had been encouraging. They said some of the voluntary patients did not agree airdent is entirely painless, but most say it is an amazing improvement over regular drills.

The colleges are working to take any bugs out of the instrument before it is put on the market, and to develop possible improvements in the present working methods.

The main apparatus of airdent resembles a conventional drill, but it never comes in contact with the tooth.

Another part of the apparatus is a thick rubber hose with a metal mouthpiece at the end. This acts like a vacuum cleaner to suck the abrasive from the patient's mouth.

Appomattox, Va., May 3.
Editor, Times-Virginian,

As a member of one of the home demonstration clubs of the county, I should like to comment on Mrs. B. G. Anderson's letter of last week.

In this letter she emphasizes the fact that she is grateful for our support and the opportunity to work with us. I think it is we who should be grateful for the great good luck which is ours in having for a home agent, a woman of such sterling character as Mrs. Anderson. Seldom if we find a person so universally loved and admired; so loyal to her friends, her home and her adopted county.

So, I am sure every club member and a host of other friends will join with me in saying, in her own words to us, "We are proud of what you have done, Mrs. Anderson, but even prouder of the chance to know you and work with you."

Sincerely,
Verna F. Connor.
